Echoes of Fort Assiniboine & District Air Cadets by Gene Redington and M. Strand

Air Cadet Sub Flight of Barrhead 526 Squadron was formed at Fort Assiniboine in the fall of 1953, under the leadership of Gene Redington. Approximately twenty boys took part in the Cadet training every Wednesday night in the Legion basement. Once a month they ventured to Barrhead to participate with the Parent Squadron. Over the years many local boys took part in this training. All who did will always have many fond memories of Scholarship Awards, summer camps, flying and gliding and bush survival camps. The following describes some of the interesting events and of what Cadets are all about.

1954 - Our young Air Cadets have another profitable and enjoyable experience to their credit; three

Mark your Calendar for the 2nd Annual Music for Charity Event

The 2nd annual "Music For Charity" Event is set to roll on September 30th the Senior's Circle. An extensive line-up will entertain from 2 pm until 10 pm. The beneficary is the Community Lunchbox Program.

Organizers Brandon Stuckless, Brennon Frieson and Tevin Cotton collected $1,020 last year and hope to double the amount this year.

Cotton stated " we plan on doing this event every year as we are all fathers and believe in ensuring no child goes without a healthy meal."

More then 75% of the performing acts are local musicians straight out of Whitecourt.

There will be a $5.00 entrance fee with attendees allowed to come and go during the event. Further donations can be made at the event as well.

Top 5 Reasons to Advertise in the Community Advisor

1. Support a Truly Free Press. The Advisor has ground breaking political columns that help keep alive the concept of a truly free press. We also have local news, bad jokes, history, puzzles etc., so that there is something for everyone.

2. Monthly Production. You can consistently advertise for a fraction of the cost of a weekly. For example, you can pay just $44.95 a month for a 1/8 page B&W Ad with a six month booking.

3. Total Market Coverage. We cover Whitecourt's trading area. Every month, approximately 2,000 copies of the Community Advisor are sent to Blue Ridge, Carrot Creek, Fox Creek, Ft. Assiniboine, Mayerthorpe, Peers, Sangudo, Swan Hills and Whitecourt. We also drop off 1,250 additional copies at coffee shops etc.

4 Our handy booklet format. It costs significantly more to produce, but it means your advertisement is likely to stay in circulation longer.

5. Find the OZ Contest. We give away monthly prizes, with a grand year end price of a laptop to readers who study our ads to find a hidden OZ.

"It's really kind of hard to be a suburb of nothing. If you don't have a downtown, you really don't have anything. It's hard to build a community around parking lots and subdivisions."

— Ed McMahon

Down Development Association underway

Whitecourt has joined the ranks of many municipalities, big and small, that have created an organization specifically to help keep the downtown alive and vibrant. The impetus came from Sandy Bilau of Whitecourt Workwear and Ladies Boutique and was quickly embraced as an idea whose time has come by downtown organizations.

At first, the idea was to follow the lead of those towns and cities who had developed Downtown Business Associations. However, it quickly became apparent that the more inclusive Downtown Development Association tag would serve better. There are many downtown non-profits and not-for-profit organizations that have a lot to offer in the way of creating vibrancy in our downtown core. They would include the Royal Canadian Legion, Community Lunchbox, Little Big Fort, the downtown churches and many other organizations.

Last month the Advisor pubished a Downtown Issue

Lloydminster Resident Wins $1.8 Million at Eagle River Casino!

Submitted — Lloydminster resident, John G, played Diamond Millions at Eagle River Casino and won $1,841,659.68 on August 18, 2016 when his lucky spin landed on three Diamond Million symbols.

John, originally from Newfoundland, now residing in Lloydminster, AB, says it was fate that brought him through Whitecourt on August 18, he wasn't supposed to pass through until the following day. John regularly stops by on his way through because he enjoys the great service. He was looking down when Diamond Millions hit, he looked up at the machine going wild and thought someone was playing a trick on him. He plans to visit his mother in Newfoundland and his wife in the Philippines.

A man rushed into a busy doctor's office and shouted, "Doctor! I think I'm shrinking!"

The doctor calmly responded, "Now, settle down. You'll just have to be a little patient."

Gimme a School Break

Summer vacation was over and a relieved Mom was catching up on her work now that her children were gone for the day.

Only an hour after the new school year had started, a teacher phoned tell her that one of her children was misbehaving.

"Wait just a minute," the overwhelmed Mom blurted out. "I had Johnny with me for three months and I never called you once when he misbehaved! Couldn't you show me the same courtesy?"

First Day of School Blues

A mother knocked on the door of her son's room and said cheerfully, "Up. Up. It's time to go to school."

The son replied, "I don't want to go to school."

"You have to go," the mother said, "the summer's over"

"I hate that school. The kids make fun of me and the teachers hate me" came the voice from behind the door.

"You still have to go, " exclaimed the mother.

"Why" came the answer.

"Because," replied the mother, "you're 42 years old and you're the principal!"

Judgement Day

When asked for her occupation, a woman charged with a traffic violation said she was a schoolteacher.

The judge rose from the bench. "Madam, I have waited some time for a schoolteacher to appear before this court."

He smiled. "Now, sit down at that table and write 500 times, 'I will not pass through a red light."

that looked at the challenges the downtown faced, past efforts at downtown revitalization, and possible solutions for the future. The main takeaway was that there is lots of opportunity for the various stakeholders to work together to improve the downtown experience.

In addition to downtown organizations, key participants include the Town of Whitecourt and the Whitecourt and District Chamber of Commerce. Rhonda Carter of the Town's Whitecourt Economic Development Committe (WEDC) has initiated a business visitation program to solicit more feedback. The WEDC has also joined in with the Chamber and the DDA for the planning of the next downtown promotion, the Fall Festival on September 17.

Additionally, a meeting was also called at which both Mayor Maryann Chickak and Town CAO Peter Smyl were in attendance, along with Town and provincial economic development organizations. Support was offered to the nascent Downton Development Association (DDA) which was in the process of creating an email database of its members to get their feedback on projects that could enhance the downtown.

Downtown revitalization has a mixed record of success across North America. Mall shopping was the original impetus behind the decline of downtowns, and now there is the additional challenge of online shopping. However, many downtowns have successfully re-invented themselves as entertainment and educational centres, in addition to continuing as shopping districts.

Quite often, the heritage of an area is featured in downtown revitalization efforts, given that downtowns were usually the original gathering places for the erstwhile agricultural inhabitants of an area. The Whitecourt downtown in not an exception to this. The Whitecourt history books, available at the Town Office and Library, are filled with photographs of our pioneers and downtown buildings from the early part of the 1900's. Perhaps this theme can be incorporated for additional educational themes for downtown revitalization.

When Diane found out she was pregnant. Her 4-year-old son overheard some of his parents private conversations.

The 4-year-old informed the neighbours "If it's a girl we're going to call her Christina, and if it's another boy we're going to call it Quits!"

Town Council Update

Recent allocation of funds from the federal government will allow the Town of Whitecourt to extend the River Erosion Control Project downstream to include land owned by the Town and the Whitecourt Golf & Country Club.

Originally identified as an area in need of protection, the spur proposed near the golf course was not included in the original project due to budget limitations. Development of the spur will require additional engineering and environmental approvals, which will delay work in the area until next year. Construction of spurs along the Athabasca River near the Millar Western Forest Products site east towards 47 Street continues. As previously advertised, access to the Athabasca River from Riverside Trail and 47th Street is closed temporarily to allow construction to proceed. For details on the project please visit our website at www.whitecourt.ca.

The Town of Whitecourt has awarded funds to Community Lunch Box and Timio's Liquor for projects under the Vitalization Grant Program. The grant program assists property owners in the downtown core and along Highway 43 to upgrade the façade of their building to meet the architectural theme adopted in Whitecourt's Vitalization Plan.

Whitecourt Town Council has provided first reading to Bylaw 1521 which will allow the Town to borrow $3 million for continued development of road and utility infrastructure in the Athabasca Flats East area. The project includes the construction of McIlwaine Drive and the extension of Mink Creek Road in preparation for the opening of the new Living Waters Catholic School and future residential development. The expenditure will be recovered as land is further developed in the area.

Following a Public Hearing that was held in June, Council will not be amending the Downtown South Area Structure Plan to remove the requirement to provide utility service and build the road to a paved municipal standard on 47 Avenue, from 49 Street west to 51 Street.

Whitecourt Town Council has approved a request to extend the requirement to develop underground improvements in the west Whitecourt area, to serve the Midstream Silica lot adjacent to the Town's rail spur.

The Province recently announced another round of funding available through the GreenTRIP Program to allow for further capital projects as part of Whitecourt Transit. The Town of Whitecourt will be applying for $620,500 through the program to purchase an additional bus, accessories, benches and shelters to provide future enhancements and efficiencies to the Whitecourt Transit service.

Whitecourt Town Council has approved a request from the Whitecourt Mountain Bike Association to advance the group $30,000 so that work can begin on Phase 1 of the Mountain Bike Park. The funds will be paid back over 2 years. For more information on the Association visit www.bikewhitecourt.com.

Councillor Darlene Chartrand has been appointed Deputy Mayor from September 1 to October 31, 2016.

Japan's "Helicopter Money" Play: Road to Hyperinflation or Cure for Debt Deflation?

by Ellen Brown

Fifteen years after embarking on its largely ineffective quantitative easing program, Japan appears poised to try the form recommended by Ben Bernanke in his notorious "helicopter money" speech in 2002. The Japanese test case could finally resolve a longstanding dispute between monetarists and money reformers over the economic effects of government-issued money.

When then-Fed Governor Ben Bernanke gave his famous helicopter money speech to the Japanese in 2002, he was talking about something quite different from the quantitative easing they actually got and other central banks later mimicked. Quoting Milton Friedman, he said the government could reverse a deflation simply by printing money and dropping it from helicopters. A gift of free money with no strings attached, it would find its way into the real economy and trigger the demand needed to power productivity and employment.

> "As the Bank of England recently acknowledged, the vast majority of the money supply is now created by [private] banks when they make loans."

What the world got instead was a form of QE in which new money is swapped for assets in the reserve accounts of banks, leaving liquidity trapped on bank balance sheets. Whether manipulating bank reserves can affect the circulating money supply at all is controversial. But if it can, it is only by triggering new borrowing. And today, according to Richard Koo, chief economist at the Nomura Research Institute, individuals and businesses are paying down debt rather than taking out new loans. They are doing this although credit is very "accommodative" (cheap), because they need to rectify their debt-ridden balance sheets in order to stay afloat. Koo calls it a "balance sheet recession."

As the Bank of England recently acknowledged, the vast majority of the money supply is now created by banks when they make loans. Money is created when loans are made, and it is extinguished when they are paid off. When loan repayment exceeds borrowing, the money supply "deflates" or shrinks. New money then needs to be injected to fill the breach. Currently, the only way to get new money into the economy is for someone to borrow it into existence; and since the private sector is not borrowing, the public sector must, just to replace what has been lost in debt repayment. But government borrowing from the private sector means running up interest charges and hitting deficit limits.

The alternative is to do what governments arguably should have been doing all along: issue the money directly to fund their budgets. Having exhausted other options, some central bankers are now calling for this form of "helicopter money," which may finally be raining on Japan if not Canada or the US.

The Japanese Trial Balloon

Following a sweeping election win announced on July 10th, Prime Minister Shinzo Abe said he may proceed with a JPY10 trillion ($100 billion) stimulus funded by Japan's first new major debt issuance in four years. The stimulus would include establishing 21st century infrastructure, faster construction of high-speed

Canada's Only Mobile Glass Blowing Studio Joins Local Artists In Fox Creek, Saturday, September 10.

Want to see something totally different in our part of Alberta, perhaps even try it for yourself? Come on out to Fox Creek September 10 and enjoy our CREATION LOCATION: ASSEMBLY REQUIRED event. Fox Creek is just down the road and it will be well worth your time. Not only will the Glass House Collective from Calgary be demonstrating the art of glass blowing with some audience members participating, you will have the chance to work with several local artists producing your own masterpieces to take home. Included will be acrylic and tole painting, vellum masterpieces, caricature drawing, mosaic totems, scrapbooking, crayon drips and Zentangle. You won't want to miss out on making Spring Rolls with Ronald and watching the carving and portrait demonstrations. Bring the kids, there will be oodles of art and activities for them as well. This is all happening at the Fox Creek School at 501 – 8 Street and is free of charge.

On site will be the Playground Society with a fundraising BBQ to keep you fed during the afternoon.

This exciting afternoon starts at 12:00 noon after the annual Fox Creek Fun Run (see info below) and is sponsored by the Town of Fox Creek, the Community Resource Centre and the Fox Creek Municipal Library. For a sneak preview of the Glass Blowers check out this link. http://www.calgarysun.com/2015/12/13/calgary-glassblowers-bring-their-craft-to-the-masses-with-mobile-studio

For information about the Second Annual Fox Creek Fun Run check the Town of Fox Creek website. It takes place at the Tourist Information Centre downtown and starts with registration at 9:00 am and goes until 11:45 with a kid's 1 KM run, individual adult and corporate challenge events. Call 780-622-3896 or 780-622-2418 to preregister and for more information.

What do REAs and coyotes have in common?

Rural Electrification Associations (REA) and coyotes are survivors. Both exist in rural Alberta and those that have survived have adapted over time to a changing environment. While the coyote might be a nuisance, no one can deny that it is a determined survivor and great adapter. Like the coyote, REAs continue to survive and adapt despite changes and challenges in the marketplace.

The battle for survival will demand REA members get as excited and energized about their electricity distribution system cooperative as those who first established the REAs. Over six decades ago it was easy to get excited about being a member of the REA because it literally meant you would finally have access to electricity. That's old hat now, so members will have to decide whether local control and ownership appeals to them. If it does, and if having a not for profit electricity distribution system that keeps money in the community is important, then it's time to get excited again. Gone are the days of apathy. Members will have to show up and get plugged into their REAs if they want to enjoy the benefits of cooperatively owning an electricity distribution system and having a say in their own rates.

Anyone with their finger on the pulse knows that rural Albertans are an independent lot. They like the idea of having some control over their destiny and some say in how things happen. Those same ideas were at the root of the cooperative REA movement over sixty years ago and they continue to energize REA members today. Alberta REA members are not ready to go quietly into a future without input or ownership rights.

Like the coyote, the REA is a survivor.

How can members "get plugged into their REAs?

A valid contract with your REA makes you a member of the not-for-profit cooperative with a democratic right to vote and run for a volunteer position on the board. REA boards govern their associations and, as active members of the community, contribute to the local rural economy.

Sponsored by the Alberta Federation of REAs Ltd.

cars, chauffered by Gene Redington, Frank Lawton and Douglas McArthur, respectively, left here at ten thirty AM with the boys groomed and shined, especially well for the occasion. On their arrival at the RCAF station at Namao, a flying trip in a Dakota had been arranged for them. They enjoyed the higher altitude and wonderful view for one half hour. When back on terra firma, they proceeded to the RCAF survival school, listening to a lecture on survival in the north with interesting demonstrations. They saw a C3119 Flying Box Car and had its mechanism explained. After a brief waiting in the Corporal's lounge, they marched into the airmen's mess for a bountiful supper, of which none were too slow to partake, even to second or third helpings. They arrived at home at nine thirty, thrilled to remember such a full and exciting day.

1955 - Fort Air Cadets Stranded in Barrhead Town

Eleven Air Cadets from Fort Assiniboine motored to Barrhead on June 1st, by way of Vega, in cars driven by Marlin Strand, Jim Veitch and E. Redington for the annual inspection. Group Captain Lowe, of the 418 Reserve Squadron, Edmonton and an Executive from Provincial Command were in charge. The parade was extensive and smart with only eight cadets absent, owing to difficulties caused by high water and bad roads. Our local boys had to stay in Barrhead overnight as it was impossible to use the motor boat crossing in the dark of night. Thus the Air Cadets made their return trip Friday morning, crossing the Athabasca with a motor boat owned and piloted by Harry Phelan, after which the parents breathed a sigh of relief for the safe return of their young sons. Publicity over the air had been given about the isolation of this party and the RCAF sent an Otter aircraft to the Fort to ascertain that all their future potential airmen were safely back at their homes. The plane landed in a field nearby and caused considerable excitement amongst the population. Word has just been received that our young Corporal Wm. Jackman has been awarded a Senior Leadership Course at Camp Borden. Cpi. Wayne Lloyd and Cpl. Douglas McArthur of Fort Assiniboine sub flight had each been awarded a Flying Scholarship. A special "Thank You" is extended from the Fort Assiniboine sub flight Air Cadets to all those who kindly gave accommodation to the cadets and their guides who could not return home because of high water.

Cadets Visit Namao Port. On Wednesday afternoon the Barrhead Air Cadet Squadron No 528 visited RCAF Station Namao. Seventy-three cadets made the trip along with Flt. Lieut. G. D. Holland, Flying Officer N. S. Miller, Flying Officer Gene Redington. Instructors A. Sveen and G. Livingstone, secretary-treasurer of the Civilian Committee. The Squadron left Barrhead at 12:30 hours and on arriving at Namao were met by Flt. Lieut. Burns, the newly appointed liaison officer for the Squadron. F. L. Burns held a briefing in the Station theatre after which the Squadron was broken into four groups and to each group a Station Officer was assigned to conduct a tour.

The Cadets were taken through the hangars, shown some of the latest aircraft just arrived from Britain, as well as the Canadian jets. They were also taken through the safety equipment section, the stored section and all were given a ride in a Dakota. After which a hearty meal in the Airmen's mess was well patronized by all. The squadron will parade Monday, November 12, at nine fifteen at the Legion Hall. Around this time the Cadet Program at the Fort phased out for a number of years and revived again in 1967, with Gene Redington again as their instructor. A worthy mention here that Gene Redington was the Commanding Officer in Barrhead for three years. The Cadets would meet at the Fort and go by cars to Barrhead every Wednesday night. Some of the Cadets stayed with the group for four years and longer. Father and Son banquets were a yearly event, also the annual inspection where promotions and awards were given out. So . . . our Cadet group at the Fort has been a very worthwhile organization and to the boys who took part, I'm sure they will agree that it was a memorable experience. In fact, Ronnie Strand went onto the Armed Forces because of his cadet training. Gene gave his time and support for our Cadets for approximately eight years, which I'm sure was appreciated very much. THANKS.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's how it works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a Sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle.

rail lines, and measures to support domestic demand.

According to Gavyn Davies in the July 17th Financial Times:

> Whether or not they choose to admit it – which they will probably resist very hard – the Abe government is on the verge of becoming the first government of a major developed economy to monetise its government debt on a permanent basis since 1945.
> . . . The direct financing of a government deficit by the Bank of Japan is illegal, under Article 5 of the Public Finance Act. But it seems that the government may be considering manoeuvres to get round these roadblocks.
> Recently, the markets have become excited about the possible issuance of zero coupon perpetual bonds that would be directly purchased by the BoJ, a charade which basically involves the central bank printing money and giving it to the government to spend as it chooses. There would be no buyers of this debt in the open market, but it could presumably sit on the BoJ balance sheet forever at face value.

Bernanke's role in this maneuver was suggested in a July 14th Bloomberg article, which said:

> Ben S. Bernanke, who met Japanese leaders in Tokyo this week, had floated the idea of perpetual bonds during earlier discussions in Washington with one of Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's key advisers. . . .
> He noted that helicopter money — in which the government issues non-marketable perpetual bonds with no maturity date and the Bank of Japan directly buys them — could work as the strongest tool to overcome deflation . . . .

Key is that the bonds can't be sold and never come due. In QE as done today, the central bank reserves the right to sell the bonds it purchases back into the market, in order to shrink the money supply in the event of a future runaway inflation. But that is not the only way to shrink the money supply. The government can just raise taxes and void out the additional money it collects. And neither tool should be necessary if inflation rates are properly monitored.

The Japanese stock market shot up in anticipation of new monetary stimulus, but it dropped again after the BBC aired an interview with Bank of Japan Governor Haruhiko Kuroda recorded in June. He ruled out the possibility of "helicopter money" — defined on CNBC.com as "essentially printing money and distributing payouts" — since it violated Japanese law. As the Wall Street Journal observed, however, Bernanke's non-marketable perpetual bonds could still be on the table, as a way to "tiptoe toward helicopter money, while creating a fig leaf of cover to say it isn't direct monetization."

Who Should Create the Money Supply, Banks or Governments?

If the Japanese experiment is in play, it could settle a long-standing dispute over whether helicopter money will "reflate" or simply hyperinflate the money supply.

One of the more outspoken critics of the approach is David Stockman, who wrote a scathing blog post on July 14th titled "Helicopter Money – The Biggest Fed Power Grab Yet." Outraged at the suggestion by Loretta

Mester of the Cleveland Fed (whom he calls "clueless") that helicopter money would be the "next step" if the Fed wanted to be more accommodative, Stockman said:

> This is beyond the pale because "helicopter money" isn't some kind of new wrinkle in monetary policy, at all. It's an old as the hills rationalization for monetization of the public debt – that is, purchase of government bonds with central bank credit conjured from thin air.

Stockman, however, may be clueless as to where the dollar comes from. Today, it is all created out of thin air; and most of it is created by private banks when they make loans. Who would we rather have creating the national money supply – a transparent and accountable public entity charged with serving the public interest, or a private corporation solely intent on making profits for its shareholders and executives? We've seen the results of the private system: fraud, corruption, speculative bubbles, booms and busts.

"Who would we rather have creating the national money supply – a transparent and accountable public entity charged with serving the public interest, or a private corporation solely intent on making profits for its shareholders and executives? We've seen the results of the private system: fraud, corruption, speculative bubbles, booms and busts."

Adair Turner, former chairman of the UK Financial Services Authority, is a cautious advocate of helicopter money. He observes:

> We have been left with so much debt we can't just grow our way out of it – we should consider a radical option.

Not that allowing the government to issue money is so radical. It was the innovative system of Benjamin Franklin and the American colonists. Paper scrip represented the government's IOU for goods and services received. The debt did not have to be repaid in some other currency. The government's IOU was money. The US dollar is a government IOU backed by the "full faith and credit of the United States." (Editor's Note: The publicly owned Bank of Canada issued a significant part of our nations's money supply up until 1974, and can easily be given the power to do so again. This would save the taxpayer-billions in interest payments. In essence, the private creation of money constitutes a massive fraud on the public).

The U.S. Constitution gives Congress the power to "coin money [and] regulate the value thereof." Having the power to regulate the value of its coins, Congress could legally issue trillion dollar coins to pay its debts if it chose. As Congressman Wright Patman noted in 1941:

> The Constitution of the United States does not give the banks the power to create money. The Constitution says that Congress shall have the power to create money, but now, under our system, we will sell bonds to commercial banks and obtain credit from those banks. I believe the time will come when people [will] actually blame you and me and everyone else connected with this Congress for sitting idly by and permitting such an idiotic system to continue.

bonds with no maturity date" is obviously sleight of hand, a convoluted way of letting the government issue the money it needs in order to do what governments are expected to do. But it is a necessary charade in a system in which the power to create money has been hijacked from governments by a private banking monopoly engaged in its own sleight of hand, euphemistically called "fractional reserve lending." The modern banking model is a magician's trick in which banks lend money only a fraction of which they actually have, effectively counterfeiting the rest as deposits on their books when they make loans.

Governments today are blocked from exercising their sovereign power to issue the national money supply by misguided legislation designed to avoid hyperinflation. Legislators steeped in flawed monetarist theory are more comfortable borrowing from banks that create the money on their books than creating it themselves. To satisfy these misinformed legislators and the bank lobbyists holding them in thrall, governments must borrow before they spend; but taxpayers balk at the growing debt and interest burden this borrowing entails. By borrowing from its own central bank with "non-marketable perpetual bonds with no maturity date," the government can satisfy the demands of all parties.

Critics may disapprove of the helicopter money option, but the market evidently approves. Japanese shares shot up for four consecutive days after Abe announced his new fiscal stimulus program, in the strongest rally since February. As noted in a July 11th ZeroHedge editorial, Japan "has given the world a glimpse of not only how 'helicopter money' will look, but also the market's enthusiastic response, which needless to say is music to the ears of central bankers everywhere." If the Japanese trial balloon is successful, many more such experiments can be expected globally.
